Constitutional Provisions

U.S. CONST. amend. I..... 2

U.S. CONST. amend. XIV..... 2

INTRODUCTION

2 Plaintiffs are three Christian churches who desire to operate according to their religious 3 beliefs that all human life—including life in the womb—is made in the image of God and 4 deserving of protection. But in August 2014, the California Department of Managed Health Care 5 (“DMHC” or “the State”) mandated that the Churches’ employee healthcare plans cover elective 6 abortion, regardless of their religious beliefs. Remarkably, the DMHC did not even notify the 7 Churches of this policy change when implemented in August 2014. Instead, the Churches 8 discovered this mandate on their own, promptly sought exemptions from their insurers, but were 9 denied because of the DMHC’s directive. Still, nearly eight years later, the DMHC refuses to 10 change its policy or to accommodate the Churches’ beliefs.

11 The constitutional violation is now undeniable. This Court previously dismissed the 12 Churches’ free exercise and equal protection claims, but the Ninth Circuit vacated and remanded 13 following the Supreme Court’s recent decision in Fulton v. City of Philadelphia, 141 S. Ct. 1868
14 (2021). In Fulton, the Supreme Court reaffirmed that a law or regulation that provides a 15 “mechanism for individualized exemptions” is not generally applicable. Id. at 1877. Thus, when 16 the state creates a system of discretionary exemptions from a policy, it must grant exemptions for 17 cases of “religious hardship” or present compelling reasons not to do so. Id.

18 Under Fulton, the Churches are entitled to summary judgment. Individualized exemptions 19 from the State’s Abortion Coverage Requirement are available for “good cause” or if “in the 20 public interest.” So Fulton is decisive: strict scrutiny must apply. And the State cannot survive 21 “the most demanding test known to constitutional law.” City of Boerne v. Flores, 521 U.S. 507, 22 534 (1997). Forcing the Churches to provide likeminded church employees with elective abortion 23 coverage is in no way a compelling interest. Nor is the coverage requirement the least restrictive 24 way to achieve any interest the State might have. Indeed, the State’s “creation of a system of 25 exceptions” undermines any claim that the coverage requirement “can brook no departures.” 26 Fulton, 141 S. Ct. at 1882. Equally, the coverage requirement intrudes upon the Churches’ 27 internal autonomy, which also infringes their First Amendment rights. See U.S. CONST. amend. I.
28

1 And the State’s preference to accommodate some religious beliefs, but not the Churches, violates 2 the Equal Protection Clause. See U.S. CONST. amend. XIV.

3 Accordingly, the Court should grant the Churches’ motion and end the ongoing 4 constitutional violation.

5 FACTUAL BACKGROUND

6 A. The Churches and their religious beliefs.

7 Foothill Church, Calvary Chapel Chino Hills, and Shepherd of the Hills Church (“the 8 Churches”) are three Christian churches in California. Plaintiff’ Statement of Undisputed Material
9 Facts (“SUMF”) ¶¶ 1–3. They believe the Holy Bible is the inspired and inerrant Word of God
10 and thus it guides every aspect of Christian life, practice, morals, and doctrine. Id. ¶ 5. The Bible 11 teaches—and the Churches believe—that all human life begins at conception, is purposefully 12 created by God, is the only living creature made in His image, and is sacred and worthy of 13 protection from conception to natural death. Id. ¶ 6. As a result, the Churches believe abortion is a 14 sin and plainly contrary to their Christian beliefs. Id. ¶ 7.

15 This belief about the sanctity of human life motivates the Churches’ ministries and 16 outreach. For instance, Foothill Church financially supports and volunteers at a local pregnancy 17 center that encourages and assists parents in choosing life. Lewis Decl. ¶ 12. Calvary Chapel 18 Chino Hills likewise supports local medical centers that offer free, life-affirming counseling and 19 medical services to women facing unexpected pregnancies. Hibbs Decl. ¶ 8. And Shepherd of the 20 Hills Church counsels and helps women who have had abortions. Rutherford Decl. ¶ 12. The 21 Churches frequently preach on the sanctity of life, encourage members to engage in pro-life 22 causes, and provide other information and helpful resources to families contemplating—or 23 healing from—abortion. E.g., Lewis Decl. ¶¶ 11–12.

24 The Churches’ religious beliefs also dictate that they care for their employees, which they 25 do so in part by providing health insurance to their employees and families. SUMF ¶¶ 10–12. But 26 because the Churches believe abortion is a sin, they cannot pay for or facilitate coverage for 27 elective abortion in their employee healthcare plans. Id. ¶¶ 8–9, 13. Although DMHC had allowed 28 religious organizations to obtain coverage consistent with their religious beliefs before, id. ¶¶ 25–

1 26, the DMHC director summarily announced in August 2014 that it was illegal for insurers to 2 exclude or limit abortion coverage in their healthcare plans, id. ¶¶ 15–20. Since 2014, the 3 Churches’ health care plans have been forced to provide elective abortion coverage, in violation 4 of the Churches’ sincerely held religious beliefs. Id. ¶¶ 49–55.

5 B. The DMHC and the Knox-Keene Act.

6 Defendant Mary Watanabe is the director of the DMHC. The DMHC is the regulatory 7 body responsible for enforcing California’s Knox-Keene Health Care Service Plan Act of 1975
8 (“Knox-Keene Act”) and its related regulations. Cal. Health & Safety Code § 1340, et seq.

9 Under the Knox-Keene Act, “health care service plans” must provide coverage for “all of 10 the basic health care services included in subdivision (b) of Section 1345.” Cal. Health & Safety 11 Code § 1367(i) (“basic health care services” provision). As defined, “basic health care services” 12 means: (1) physician services; (2) hospital inpatient services and ambulatory care services; (3) 13 diagnostic laboratory and diagnostic and therapeutic radiologic services; (4) home health services; 14 (5) preventive health services; (6) emergency healthcare services; and (7) hospice care. Id.
15 § 1345(b). Under its regulatory authority, the DMHC has defined the scope of “basic health care 16 services” to include services only “where medically necessary.” Cal. Code Regs. tit. 28, 17 § 1300.67.

18 Yet the “basic health care services” provision is riddled with exemptions. For example, 19 the director of the DMHC “may, for good cause, by rule or order exempt a plan contract or any 20 class of plan contracts from that requirement.” Cal. Health & Safety Code § 1367(i). The director 21 also may exempt “any class of persons or plan contracts” from any of the Act’s requirements, 22 including the “basic health care services” provision, if she believes such exemption is “in the 23 public interest.” Id. § 1343(b); see also id. § 1344(a) (director may “waive any requirement of any 24 rule” if the director determines in her “discretion” that the requirement is not “in the public 25 interest”). There are no rules, policies, or procedures governing this discretionary exemption 26 authority. SUMF ¶ 31.

27 What’s more, the State has categorically exempted certain healthcare plans from the Act’s 28 requirements, either by statute or regulation. See, e.g., Cal. Health & Safety Code § 1343(e)

1 (exempting health care plans “directly operated by a bona fide public or private institution of 2 higher learning”); Cal. Code Regs. tit. 28, § 1300.43 (exempting “small plans” administered 3 solely by an employer that “does not have more than five subscribers”).

4 C. Abortion advocates lobby the DMHC to eliminate religious accommodations.

5 Before August 2014, the DMHC allowed religious organizations to exclude or limit 6 abortion coverage in their healthcare plans. SUMF ¶¶ 23–26. It approved a variety of abortion 7 exclusions and limitations for religious organizations, including provisions that:

- 8 • Excluded coverage for “elective abortions” and “voluntary termination of pregnancy.” 9 Galus Decl. Ex. 8 at 2 (insurer deleting this approved plan language for religious 10 employers in response to August 2014 letters); Galus Decl. Ex. 6 at Bates 1–2 (showing insurer offered these exclusions for religious employer groups);
- 11 • Excluded coverage for “voluntary abortion, except when medically necessary to save the 12 mother’s life,” see, e.g., Galus Decl. Ex. 8 at 4 (insurer deleting this approved plan language for religious employers in response to August 2014 letters);
- 13 • Excluded coverage for “elective terminations of pregnancy.” Galus Decl. Ex. 7 at 1 14 (showing insurer had contracts with nine religious employer groups that used this 15 language); and
- 16 • Limited coverage to abortions performed when, “due to an existing medical condition, the 17 mother’s life would be in jeopardy as a direct result of pregnancy,” Galus Decl. Ex. 10 (letter from DMHC approving this plan language for Catholic hospital system).

18 But in November 2013, the DMHC was contacted by the National Health Law Program 19 (“NHLP”), an organization that promotes the expansion of abortion access and “develops 20 strategies in partnership with state . . . policymakers” to eliminate religious “refusals.”¹ SUMF ¶ 21 35. NHLP told the DMHC that two Catholic universities—Loyola Marymount University 22 (“LMU”) and Santa Clara University (“SCU”)—recently announced, “they were eliminating 23 abortion coverage from their employee health plans.” Id. NHLP therefore requested a meeting 24 with DMHC officials to “resolve these issues.” Id. In response, the DMHC met with 25 representatives of NHLP, the ACLU, and Planned Parenthood, and began surveying insurers 26 about the scope of abortion coverage in their healthcare plans. Id. ¶¶ 35–37. The survey

27 _____
28 ¹ National Health Law Program, Reproductive & Sexual Health, Health Care Refusals, <https://perma.cc/VFV6-V3AD> (last visited February 1, 2022).

1 confirmed that the DMHC had approved plans excluding or limiting abortion coverage for 2 religious organizations. Id. ¶¶ 15–16, 23–26. In contrast, there was no evidence that the DMHC 3 had approved such plans for secular, nonreligious employers. Id. ¶¶ 27–28.

4 While the DMHC was contemplating what to do, Planned Parenthood worried about the 5 “DMHC’s ability to find a solution” and warned that it was considering legislation to eliminate 6 religious exemptions for abortion coverage. Id. ¶¶ 38–39. But Planned Parenthood said it would 7 forgo that effort in exchange for an “administrative solution,” provided the DMHC agreed to “not 8 approve any further plans that exclude coverage for abortion,” “clarif[y] that there is no such 9 thing as an elective or voluntary abortion exclusion,” “rescind [its] approval” of “plans that 10 include an abortion exclusion,” and “find a solution to fix the already approved plans being 11 offered to employees of LMU for 2014 and SCU for 2015.” Id. ¶ 40. The DMHC’s parent 12 agency—California Health and Human Services Agency—responded that it was “working with” 13 the DMHC to “resolv[e] the problem.” Id. ¶ 41.

14 D. The “Abortion Coverage Requirement” and its effect on the Churches.

15 DMHC’s “solution,” it turned out, was for it to say for the first time since the Act’s passage
16 that the Knox-Keene Act mandated elective abortion coverage. On August 22, 2014, the DMHC
17 sent letters to seven health insurers informing them that the Knox-Keene Act required coverage
18 for all legal abortion because the DMHC considered abortion a “basic health care service.” Id. ¶ 19 15; see also Galus. Decl. Ex. 1. The letters stated that DMHC surveyed plan filings and 20 determined that language limiting or excluding coverage for abortion was present in filings 21 “covering a very small fraction of California health plan enrollees.” SUMF ¶ 16; Galus. Decl., 22 Ex. 1. The letters instructed the health insurers to “amend current health plan documents” to 23 remove “any exclusion of coverage for ‘voluntary’ or ‘elective’ abortions and/or any limitation of 24 coverage to only ‘therapeutic’ or ‘medically necessary’ abortions.” SUMF ¶ 17; Galus. Decl. Ex.
25 1. The DMHC, through the letters, thus mandated that the health insurers immediately begin 26 covering all legal abortions in plan contracts that limited or excluded elective abortion coverage.
27 Id. ¶ 18.
28

1 To comply with the requirement, DMHC told the health insurers that they could “omit any 2 mention of coverage for abortion services in health plan documents,” which some insurers opted 3 to do, such as Aetna and Blue Shield. Id. ¶ 19. That led to some of the Churches’ health plans 4 being silent about abortion services, but which, in reality, covered abortion services without ever 5 informing the Churches of the change. All health insurers immediately complied with this 6 Abortion Coverage Requirement, causing religious employers—like the Churches—to cover 7 abortions in violation of their beliefs. Id. ¶ 21.

8 Because “the DMHC did not even suggest in the Letters that it would entertain any 9 exemption requests, or establish a specific procedure to review any exemption requests,” Skyline
10 Wesleyan Church v. Cal. Dep’t of Managed Health Care, 968 F.3d 738, 752–53 (9th Cir. 2020), 11 pro-life groups told DMHC that the coverage requirement violated federal law and urged the 12 department to reverse course. The DMHC refused: it said it “carefully considered all relevant 13 aspects of state and federal law in reaching its position” and would “not reverse its position on the 14 scope of required abortion coverage . . . outlined in the letters [DMHC] sent to health plans on 15 August 22, 2014.” SUMF ¶ 44. This led to the Churches filing a complaint in September 2014 16 with the Office of Civil Rights of the federal Health and Human Services Agency, claiming 17 DMHC had violated the Hyde-Weldon Amendment. Id. ¶ 45. But DMHC remained adamant; in 18 December 2014 it told a U.S. Commissioner on Civil Rights that it had “carefully considered both 19 state and federal law before reaching [the] position” set forth in the August 22, 2014, letters. Id.
20 ¶ 46.

21 In disbelief over the mandate, the Churches asked their insurers to verify that they really 22 had to cover elective abortions. Id. ¶¶ 47–48. The insurers responded that the DMHC had 23 mandated elective abortion coverage for all plans and there were no religious exemptions. Id.
24 ¶ 49. For example, Aetna explained it could no longer offer plans that excluded elective abortions 25 due to “the 08-22-2014 California abortion mandate.” Id. ¶ 50. Kaiser concurred: “[r]eligious 26 employers have no exception [from the Abortion Coverage Requirement] so they, too, must cover 27 elective abortions. This is not a decision over which we have discretion. DMHC’s directive was 28 clear and we are obliged to comply.” Id. ¶ 51; see also Lewis Decl. ¶ 21 (Kaiser explaining it

1 could no longer remove elective abortion coverage from Foothill Church’s healthcare plan, even 2 though Kaiser previously agreed to do so). So the Churches directly pleaded with DMHC and 3 sent a letter to the Director asking for a religious exemption. Id. ¶ 55. But that too was denied. Id.

4 In sum, because of DMHC’s Abortion Coverage Requirement, the Churches cannot obtain 5 a health insurance plan consistent with their religious beliefs about abortion. Id. ¶ 53.

6 E. Procedural History.

7 The Churches filed their first complaint over six years ago alleging DMHC violated the 8 Free Exercise, Free Speech, Equal Protection, and Establishment Clauses of the U.S.
9 Constitution. ECF No. 1. The Court granted DMHC’s first motion to dismiss. ECF No. 39.
10 Although the Court dismissed the free speech and establishment claims without leave to amend, it 11 gave the Churches leave to amend their complaint with respect to the free exercise and equal 12 protection claims. Id. at 22. The Churches amended, but the Court again dismissed the Churches’ 13 free exercise and equal protection claims without prejudice. ECF No. 68. The Churches filed their 14 second amended complaint in October 2017. ECF No. 72. The second amended complaint sought, 15 among other things: (1) a declaration that application of the Abortion Coverage Requirement to 16 the Churches is unlawful; (2) a permanent injunction requiring DMHC not to enforce the 17 Abortion Coverage Requirement against the Churches and similar religious organizations; (3) an 18 award of costs and attorney’s fees. Id. at 31–32.

19 DMHC again moved to dismiss. ECF No. 75. The Court granted that motion without 20 leave to amend, id. at 12, holding that DMHC’s Abortion Coverage Requirement was neutral and 21 generally applicable as alleged, and therefore only had to satisfy rational basis review under the 22 Free Exercise Clause, id. at 7–10. Similarly, the Court dismissed the equal protection claim for 23 lack of “discriminatory intent.” Id. at 11.

24 The Churches appealed the dismissal of their Free Exercise, Equal Protection, and 25 Establishment Clause claims. ECF No. 88. The Ninth Circuit decided to hold the case until the 26 Supreme Court issued its decision in Fulton v. City of Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, 140 S. Ct.
27 1104 (2020) (No. 19-123). See Order at 1, Foothill Church v. Rouillard, No. 19-15658 (9th Cir.
28 Nov 24, 2020). After Fulton came down in June 2021, the Ninth Circuit “vacate[d] the district

1 court’s rulings on the Free Exercise and Equal Protection claims and remand[ed] for further 2 consideration in light of Fulton.” Foothill Church v. Watanabe, 3 F.4th 1201 (9th Cir. 2021)
3 (citation omitted); ECF No. 93; see also Fulton v. City of Philadelphia, 141 S. Ct. 1868 (2021). It
4 also affirmed the dismissal of the Establishment Clause claim in a separately filed memorandum
5 opinion. See Foothill Church v. Watanabe, 854 F. App’x 174 (9th Cir. 2021). The Ninth Circuit’s 6 Mandate issued August 10, 2021. ECF No. 95.

7 Judge Bress dissented from the court’s vacate-and-remand order because it did “not go 8 nearly far enough—or move nearly fast enough—to address the significant constitutional 9 violation that the churches plead.” Foothill, 3 F.4th at 1201–02 (Bress, J., dissenting). In his view, 10 “the Director’s broad discretionary authority to issue individualized exemptions from the abortion 11 coverage obligation means that [the court] must apply strict scrutiny to California’s requirement 12 that the churches’ health plans cover elective abortions.” Id. at 1202. Expressing concern that 13 “California has been giving the churches the run-around in an area where great sensitivity is 14 warranted,” Judge Bress would have held that the Churches “clearly stated a claim for relief 15 under the Constitution’s Free Exercise and Equal Protection Clauses.” Id. at 1204.

16 LEGAL STANDARD

17 Summary judgment is required when “there is no genuine dispute as to any material fact 18 and the movant is entitled to judgment as a matter of law.” FED. R. CIV. P. 56(a). The party 19 moving for summary judgment bears the initial burden of identifying the evidence in the record 20 that shows the absence of any genuine issue of material fact. T.W. Elec. Serv., Inc. v. Pac. Elec.
21 Contractors Ass’n, 809 F.2d 626, 630 (9th Cir. 1987). Once met, the nonmoving party must then 22 put forth “specific facts showing that there is a genuine issue for trial.” Id. (emphasis deleted).
23 When the case involves a “mixed question of fact and law and the only disputes relate to the legal 24 significance of undisputed facts, the controversy collapses into a question of law suitable to 25 disposition on summary judgment.” Thrifty Oil Co. v. Bank of Am. Nat. Tr. & Sav. Ass’n, 322 26 F.3d 1039, 1046 (9th Cir. 2003).

ARGUMENT

I. The Churches are entitled to summary judgment on their free exercise claim.

A. The Abortion Coverage Requirement violates the Free Exercise Clause because it triggers—and fails—strict scrutiny under Fulton.

“A law burdening religious practice that is not neutral or not of general application must undergo the most rigorous of scrutiny,” meaning it “must advance interests of the highest order and must be narrowly tailored in pursuit of those interests.” Church of the Lukumi Babalu Aye, Inc. v. City of Hialeah, 508 U.S. 520, 546 (1993); accord Fulton v. City of Philadelphia, 141 S. Ct. 1868, 1876–77 (2021). The undisputed material facts prove the following: that the State has burdened—and continues to burden—the Churches’ religious exercise by forcing them to provide elective abortion coverage in their healthcare plans; that the Abortion Coverage Requirement is not generally applicable or neutral; that the State does not have a compelling interest in applying the coverage requirement to the Churches’ plans; and that enforcing the coverage requirement against the Churches is not the least restrictive way to achieve any purported interest.

1. The Abortion Coverage Requirement substantially burdens the Churches’ religious exercise.

The State cannot genuinely dispute that its Abortion Coverage Requirement substantially burdens the Churches’ religious exercise. The State imposes a substantial burden on religion when it “coerce[s] [observers] into acting contrary to their religious beliefs,” Lyng v. Nw. Indian Cemetery Protective Ass’n, 485 U.S. 439, 450 (1988), or when it exerts “substantial pressure on an adherent to modify his behavior and to violate his beliefs,” Thomas v. Rev. Bd. of Indiana Emp. Sec. Div., 450 U.S. 707, 718 (1981). This is so even when the “compulsion may be indirect.” Thomas, 450 U.S. at 718.

The Churches believe and teach that abortion is the intentional destruction of innocent human life, conflicts with the Bible’s teachings about the sanctity of human life, violates the Bible’s command against murder, and is sin. SUMF ¶¶ 6–7. So they cannot provide health insurance coverage for elective abortion. Id. ¶¶ 8–9, 13. But the Abortion Coverage Requirement forces them to do exactly that. That unquestionably burdens the Churches’ religious beliefs. See Burwell v. Hobby Lobby Stores, Inc., 573 U.S. 682, 726 (2014) (contraceptive coverage mandate

1 substantially burdened employers’ religious exercise); see also Skyline, 968 F.3d at 748 (church
2 “suffered an injury in fact” when the DMHC mandated “immediate[.]” coverage of elective 3 abortion in violation of the church’s beliefs).

4 2. The Abortion Coverage Requirement triggers strict scrutiny because it 5 is not generally applicable.

6 The substantial burden established, the Abortion Coverage Requirement must satisfy strict 7 scrutiny if it is not “neutral” or “generally applicable.” Emp. Div., Dep’t of Hum. Res. of Or. v.
8 Smith, 494 U.S. 872, 878–82 (1990). While the Coverage Requirement fails to meet either 9 standard, it is “more straightforward to resolve this case under the rubric of general applicability.”
10 Fulton, 141 S. Ct. at 1877. As the Supreme Court recently explained, a law is not generally 11 applicable if it provides “a mechanism for individualized exemptions” or “prohibits religious 12 conduct while permitting secular conduct that undermines the government’s asserted interests in a 13 similar way.” Id. The Abortion Coverage Requirement does both.

14 i. The Abortion Coverage Requirement includes a system of 15 individualized exemptions.

16 The “key feature” of the Abortion Coverage Requirement “that takes it outside of rational 17 basis review and places it squarely into strict scrutiny is the Director’s broad discretion to grant 18 exemptions from the Knox-Keene Act’s ‘basic health care services’ requirement.” Foothill 19 Church v. Watanabe, 3 F.4th 1201, 1204 (9th Cir. 2021) (Bress, J., dissenting).

20 In Fulton, the Supreme Court reaffirmed that the government may not withhold a religious 21 exemption without compelling reason “where the State has in place a system of individual 22 exemptions.” 141 S. Ct. at 1877 (quoting Smith, 494 U.S. at 884). There, the City of Philadelphia 23 had refused to contract with Catholic Social Services (CSS) for foster care services unless the 24 organization agreed to certify same-sex couples as foster parents in violation of its beliefs. Id. at 25 1875–76. In so doing, the city invoked the contract’s nondiscrimination provision, claiming that it 26 categorically prohibited CSS from declining to certify same-sex couples based on its religious 27 beliefs. Id. at 1875. But exceptions from the nondiscrimination provision were in fact available at 28 the city’s “sole discretion.” Id. at 1878. That discretion, the Court held, created “a system of individual exemptions,” making the nondiscrimination provision not generally applicable. Id. And

1 it did not matter if the city had ever granted an individualized exemption. The Court explained 2 that the mere “creation of a formal mechanism for granting exceptions renders a policy not 3 generally applicable, regardless whether any exceptions have been given.” Id. at 1879 (emphasis 4 added).

5 The same is true here. Like the foster-care contract in Fulton, the Knox-Keene Act creates 6 a “system of individual exemptions” that allows the DMHC to grant exemptions from the 7 Abortion Coverage Requirement for essentially any reason. It does so in at least three separate 8 ways.

9 First, California Health & Safety Code § 1367(i) allows the DMHC to exempt any plan 10 contract or class of plan contracts from the “basic health care services” provision—and thus the 11 Abortion Coverage Requirement—for “good cause.” Second, § 1343(b) allows the DMHC to 12 exempt “any class of persons or plan contracts” from the entire Knox-Keene Act if such 13 exemption is deemed to be “in the public interest.” Third, § 1344(a) allows the DMHC to waive 14 any requirement of any rule, including the Abortion Coverage Requirement, if it believes that 15 would be “in the public interest.”

16 Just one of these exemptions overcomes any assertion of general applicability. All three, 17 considered together, obliterate it. See, e.g., Smith, 494 U.S. at 884 (“good cause” standard 18 “create[s] a mechanism for individualized exemptions”); Fulton, 141 S. Ct. at 1877 (“good cause” 19 standard destroys general applicability because it “permit[s] the government to grant exemptions 20 based on the circumstances underlying each application”); GTE Sylvania, Inc. v. Consumers 21 Union of United States, Inc., 445 U.S. 375, 384–85 (1980) (phrases such as “in the public 22 interest” and “for good cause” are “vague” and give agency officials “broad discretion” that is 23 “often abused”).

24 What’s more, the DMHC’s director has delegated this unbridled exemption authority to 25 individual staff members within the department’s Office of Plan Licensing, without providing any 26 rules, policies, or procedures for when and how to exercise this incredibly broad and important 27 power. SUMF ¶¶ 30–31. So individual staff members must “consider the particular reasons,” 28 Fulton, 141 S. Ct. at 1877, for any requested exemption and then unilaterally determine whether

1 those reasons constitute “good cause” or are “in the public interest,” Cal. Health & Safety Code
2 §§ 1367(i), 1343(b), 1344(a). And, of course, what may be “good cause” or “in the public 3 interest” for one staff member may not be for another.

4 In fact, a staff member within the Office of Plan Licensing has exercised this discretionary 5 authority, unilaterally approving a plan in October 2015 that excluded elective abortions except 6 for rape and incest and to save the life of the mother. SUMF ¶ 33. But that plan does not satisfy 7 the Churches’ religious beliefs about abortion. Id. ¶ 34. And even though exemptions can be (and 8 have been) awarded for virtually any reason, the DMHC refuses to lift a finger to accommodate 9 the Churches.

10 Because the DMHC may grant exemptions for “good cause” or if “in the public interest,” 11 “there is no doubt” the Abortion Coverage Requirement lacks general applicability and “must be 12 reviewed under strict scrutiny.” Foothill, 3 F.4th at 1205; see also Fulton, 141 S. Ct. at 1879.

13 ii. There are categorical exemptions from the Abortion Coverage 14 Requirement.

15 A law also “lacks general applicability if it prohibits religious conduct while permitting 16 secular conduct that undermines the government’s asserted interests in a similar way.” Fulton, 17 141 S. Ct. at 1877. One exemption is enough: “government regulations are not neutral and 18 generally applicable . . . whenever they treat any comparable secular activity more favorably than 19 religious exercise.” Tandon v. Newsom, 141 S. Ct. 1294, 1296 (2021) (per curiam). “[W]hether 20 two activities are comparable for purposes of the Free Exercise Clause must be judged against the 21 asserted government interest that justifies the regulation at issue.” Id.; accord Fulton, 141 S. Ct.
22 at 1877.

23 The only interests identified by the State in support of its Abortion Coverage Requirement 24 are “ensuring employers provide basic health care services” and “protecting a woman’s 25 fundamental right under California law to obtain an abortion.” ECF No. 75 at 17. But the 26 Abortion Coverage Requirement is “underinclusive for those ends.” Church of the Lukumi Babalu
27 Aye, Inc. v. City of Hialeah, 508 U.S. 520, 543 (1993). While the State pursues these asserted 28 interests against the Churches, it does not do so “across-the-board.” Smith, 494 U.S. at 884.

1 Besides the individualized exemption authority detailed above, the Knox-Keene Act also 2 includes categorical exemptions from its requirements (including the Abortion Coverage 3 Requirement) for secular reasons. For example, healthcare plans operated by higher learning 4 educational institutions need not comply with any of the Act’s requirements. Cal. Health & Safety 5 Code § 1343(e)(2). Nor must “small plans” administered by an employer with no more than five 6 subscribers. Cal. Code Regs. tit. 28, § 1300.43.

7 So the State treats some healthcare plans, such as those operated by educational 8 institutions and small employers, more favorably than the Churches’ plans. These plans are 9 “comparable” because the “asserted government interest[s]”—ensuring healthcare plans provide 10 coverage for all basic health care services and protecting employees’ abortion rights—apply 11 equally to all plans. Tandon, 141 S. Ct. at 1296. Put another way, the exempted plans are 12 “comparable” to the Churches’ plans for the general applicability analysis because the 13 government’s purported interests in ensuring elective abortion coverage applies even when an 14 educational institution operates a plan or a small employer administers a plan. Because exempting 15 those plans “endangers” the State’s purported interests to “a similar or greater degree” than would 16 accommodating the Churches’ beliefs, strict scrutiny applies. Lukumi, 508 U.S. at 543; see also 17 Tandon, 141 S. Ct. at 1296–97 (California’s COVID gathering restrictions were not generally 18 applicable where three households could not gather for in-home religious services but could 19 gather at hair salons, retail stores, and personal care services because those secular activities did 20 not “pose a lesser risk of transmission” than the in-home religious services).

21 3. The Abortion Coverage Requirement also triggers strict scrutiny 22 because it is not neutral.

23 While it is “more straightforward” to decide this case based on the lack of general 24 applicability, Fulton, 141 S. Ct. at 1877, strict scrutiny also applies because the Abortion 25 Coverage Requirement is not neutral.

26 The “[g]overnment fails to act neutrally when it proceeds in a manner intolerant of 27 religious beliefs or restricts practices because of their religious nature.” Id. A lack of neutrality 28 can be “masked, as well as overt,” so courts must scrutinize the law or regulation for even “subtle

1 departures from neutrality.” Lukumi, 508 U.S. at 534. Courts therefore must “survey 2 meticulously” the totality of the evidence, analyzing “the historical background of the decision 3 under challenge, the specific series of events leading to the enactment or official policy in 4 question, and the legislative or administrative history, including contemporaneous statements by 5 members of the decision-making body.” Id. at 534, 540. A “slight suspicion” of hostility is 6 enough to trigger strict scrutiny. Id. at 547. Here, the lack of neutrality manifests itself in at least 7 four ways.

8 First, the Abortion Coverage Requirement’s effect in “real operation,” Lukumi, 508 U.S.
9 at 535, fell only on religious organizations—something the DMHC knew would be the case 10 before issuing the Coverage Requirement in August 2014. Indeed, because of its “survey” of 11 existing plan documents, the DMHC learned that plans excluding or limiting elective abortion 12 coverage were made available only to religious organizations. SUMF ¶¶ 22–28. The actual plan 13 language not only made that explicit, e.g., Galus Decl. Exs. 6, 7, but the DMHC specifically 14 asked the insurers which type of employers had bought plans restricting abortion coverage. Their 15 answers were loud and clear: only religious organizations. Galus Decl. Ex. 6 (purchased only by 16 “religious employer[s]”); Galus Decl. Ex. 7 (same); Galus Decl. Ex. 3 (purchased only by 17 “religious or religious-affiliated organizations”). The DMHC did not receive any information that 18 secular, nonreligious employers had purchased those plans. SUMF ¶ 27. But it still issued the 19 coverage requirement anyway.

20 Second, the Abortion Coverage Requirement cannot be deemed neutral when the DMHC 21 admittedly issued the mandate in direct response to demands that it prevent religious universities 22 from excluding or limiting abortion coverage in their plans. See supra pp. 4–5. That is religious 23 targeting, plain and simple. And government action that “target[s] religious beliefs as such is 24 never permissible.” Lukumi, 508 U.S. at 533.

25 Third, the DMHC intentionally applied the Abortion Coverage Requirement to “religious 26 employers,” even though it conducted its own legal analysis—before August 22, 2014—that 27 concluded “religious employers” could legally restrict abortion coverage in their health plans.
28 SUMF ¶ 42. By telling insurers they could not through the August 2014 letters, the DMHC

1 crafted a “religious gerrymander”—“an impermissible attempt to target [religious employers] and 2 their religious practices.” Lukumi, 508 U.S. at 535 (cleaned up).

3 Fourth, the DMHC has played favorites by exempting organizations with different 4 religious beliefs: those that sought to exclude abortion coverage except in the cases of rape, 5 incest, or to save the life of the mother. SUMF ¶ 33. The DMHC has thus engaged in “covert 6 suppression of particular religious beliefs.” Lukumi, 508 U.S. at 534 (emphasis added and 7 citation omitted).

8 4. The Abortion Coverage Requirement fails strict scrutiny.

9 Because the Abortion Coverage Requirement includes a mechanism for individualized 10 exemptions, contains multiple categorical exemptions, and is not neutral towards religion, it must 11 satisfy strict scrutiny under the Free Exercise Clause. It can do so “only if it advances ‘interests of 12 the highest order’ and is narrowly tailored to achieve those interests.” Fulton, 141 S. Ct. at 1881 (quoting Lukumi, 508 U.S. at 546). It fails both prongs.

13 If the State “can achieve its interests in a manner that does not burden religion, it must do 14 so.” Id. Generalized, or “broadly formulated,” interests are insufficient. Gonzales v. O Centro 15 Espirita Beneficente Uniao do Vegetal, 546 U.S. 418, 420 (2006). Rather, the State must prove 16 that it has a compelling interest in applying the Abortion Coverage Requirement to the 17 Churches—“the particular claimant[s] whose sincere exercise of religion is being substantially 18 burdened.” Id. The State must therefore establish that it has a compelling interest in enforcing the 19 coverage requirement against the Churches’ plans, not that it has a compelling interest in elective 20 abortion coverage generally. Fulton, 141 S. Ct. at 1881.

21 Yet there is simply no interest, let alone a compelling one, in forcing the Churches to pay 22 for an employee’s elective abortion—particularly when all employees share the Churches’ 23 beliefs. No court has held as much. To the contrary, the Supreme Court has often held that the 24 government does not have a compelling interest in enforcing a law or regulation that would force 25 a religious institution to violate its religious beliefs or prohibit it from following those beliefs.
26 E.g., Fulton, 141 S. Ct. at 1882 (no compelling interest in forcing a faith-based foster-care 27 provider to certify same-sex couples in violation of its religious beliefs); O Centro, 546 U.S. at 28

1 439 (no compelling interest in barring a religious group’s sacramental use of hoasca). So 2 whatever interests the State might have in ensuring elective abortion coverage, they are not strong 3 enough to overcome a church’s right to operate according to its beliefs.

4 Even the DMHC seems to agree: it has not asserted any “compelling” interest in enforcing 5 the coverage requirement against the Churches. See ECF No. 75 at 17; accord Foothill, 3 F.4th at 6 1206 (Bress, J., dissenting) (the State “has never identified” a compelling interest).

7 Nor is applying the Abortion Coverage Requirement to the Churches narrowly tailored to 8 achieve any purported compelling interest. It fails this prong for at least three reasons. First, as 9 explained above, state statutes and regulations already exempt entire categories of plans from the 10 requirement and allow even more exemptions on an individualized basis. This “system of 11 exceptions under the [Act] undermines the [State’s] contention that its [coverage requirement] 12 can brook no departures.” Fulton, 141 S. Ct. at 1882. Second, the coverage requirement cannot be 13 narrowly tailored when the State has crafted less restrictive alternatives—by exempting religious 14 employers—in the contraceptive mandate context. See Cal. Health & Safety Code § 1367.25(c).
15 The State could simply do the same here. Third, the State historically accommodated religious 16 organizations by approving healthcare plans that excluded elective abortion coverage, see SUMF 17 ¶¶ 25–26, and other states continue to provide similar religious exemptions, e.g., Me. Rev. Stat.
18 tit. 24-A, § 4320-M(4) (exempting religious employers from Maine’s abortion coverage 19 requirement). The fact that religious accommodations were historically available in California 20 and are currently available in sister jurisdictions demonstrate a lack of narrow tailoring. Ramirez 21 v. Collier, No. 21-5592, 2022 WL 867311, at *10 (U.S. Mar. 24, 2022) (cleaned up) (history and 22 practice in other jurisdictions inform narrow tailoring analysis).

23 B. The Abortion Coverage Requirement violates the church autonomy doctrine.

24 The Abortion Coverage Requirement also violates the First Amendment because it 25 impermissibly interferes with the Churches’ autonomy. The First Amendment guarantees houses 26 of worship the “power to decide for themselves, free from state interference, matters of church 27 government as well as those of faith and doctrine.” Kedroff v. St. Nicholas Cathedral of Russ.
28 Orthodox Church in N. Am., 344 U.S. 94, 116 (1952). The right to church autonomy is separate

1 and apart from traditional free exercise claims and is not governed by Smith's neutral and 2 generally applicable standard. Hosanna-Tabor Evangelical Lutheran Church & Sch. v. E.E.O.C., 3 565 U.S. 171, 190 (2012). Whereas "Smith involved government regulation of only outward 4 physical acts," church autonomy concerns "government interference with an internal church 5 decision that affects the faith and mission of the church itself." Id. The right thus precludes 6 governmental regulation of "church administration," Serbian E. Orthodox Diocese for U.S. of Am.
7 & Canada v. Milivojevich, 426 U.S. 696, 710 (1976), "internal organization," id. at 713, and "the 8 operation of . . . churches," Kedroff, 344 U.S. at 107.

9 At bottom the Abortion Coverage Requirement tells the Churches how they must spend 10 their funds: they must use parishioners' sacrificial tithes and offerings to subsidize elective 11 abortion coverage for Church employees. This is so even though the Churches restrict 12 employment to those who agree with the Churches' beliefs about the sanctity of life and abortion.
13 SUMF ¶ 14. Part of the Churches' faith and mission is to preach and spread the teachings of the 14 Holy Bible, which includes teachings about the sanctity of life. Id. ¶¶ 4–6. A church cannot very 15 well claim abortion is sin on Sunday, and then cut a check for its insurance plan that provides 16 abortion coverage on Monday. By forcing the Churches to spend their funds to subsidize 17 abortion, the DMHC decides for the Churches how to operate and what internal decisions to make 18 about employee relationships. See E.E.O.C. v. Townley Eng'g & Mfg. Co., 859 F.2d 610, 618 19 n.13 (9th Cir. 1988) (noting the First Amendment limits the government's "ability to regulate the 20 employment relationships within churches and similar organizations"). It cannot be 21 constitutionally permissible for the DMHC to commandeer these private core decisions.

22 The Churches simply desire to not fund private conduct by its employees that violate their 23 fundamental teachings. Surely, the First Amendment safeguards the Churches' ability to make 24 such administrative decisions that have absolutely no effect on anyone outside the Church. See,
25 e.g., Little Sisters of the Poor Saints Peter & Paul Home v. Pennsylvania, 140 S. Ct. 2367, 2406
26 (2020) (Ginsburg, J., dissenting) ("exemption granted to houses of worship" from the Affordable 27 Care Act's contraceptive mandate "was justified on First Amendment grounds").
28

1 II. The Abortion Coverage Requirement violates the Equal Protection Clause.

2 The Equal Protection Clause requires the government to apply laws in a 3 nondiscriminatory manner and to treat different classes of people the same. See Freeman v. City
4 of Santa Ana, 68 F.3d 1180, 1187 (9th Cir. 1995). If the government interferes with a 5 fundamental right or if it discriminates against a suspect class, strict scrutiny applies. Kadrmas v.
6 Dickinson Pub. Sch., 487 U.S. 450, 457–58 (1988). A suspect class is one based on “inherently 7 suspect distinctions, such as . . . religion.” City of New Orleans v. Dukes, 427 U.S. 297, 303 8 (1976). Classifications based on a suspect class or that infringe fundamental rights are 9 “presumptively invidious.” Plyler v. Doe, 457 U.S. 202, 216–17 (1982).

10 Here, the Abortion Coverage Requirement violates the Equal Protection Clause for many 11 of the same reasons explained above. It not only violates the Churches’ fundamental right to the 12 free exercise of religion, but it also has not been applied equally. In fact, the DMHC has refused 13 to accommodate the Churches’ beliefs but has approved plan language for different beliefs.
14 SUMF ¶¶ 33–34. The DMHC has thus impermissibly drawn lines based on religious beliefs and 15 its unequal treatment cannot survive strict scrutiny for the same reasons as above.

16 CONCLUSION

17 For the foregoing reasons, the Court should: (1) grant summary judgment for the 18 Churches; (2) declare that the Abortion Coverage Requirement—which mandates the Churches 19 and other religious organizations cover elective abortions in their employee healthcare plans—20 violates the Free Exercise and Equal Protection Clauses; (3) permanently enjoin Defendant from 21 enforcing the Abortion Coverage Requirement to prevent the Churches and other religious 22 organizations from obtaining a healthcare plan that comports with their religious beliefs; and (4) 23 award costs and attorney’s fees.
